Ask the Motor Medics®
Automotive Advice from The Under the Hood® Show

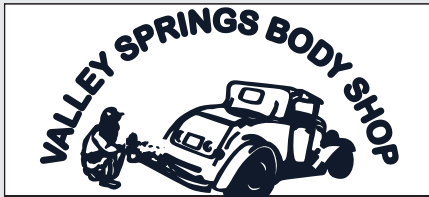

Dear Motor Medics,
I want to know about Cabin Air Filters.

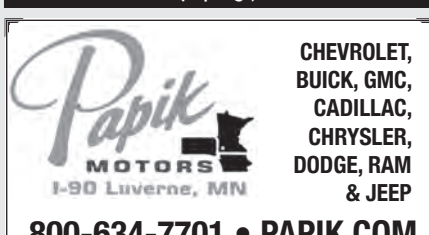

Dan in Larchwood Iowa

Dear Dan,

It's good to know if your car or truck is equipped with a Cabin Air filter. A large majority of cars and trucks made in recent years have one and you need to find out if yours is equipped. A Cabin Filter in your vehicle is much like your home's air handling system. Most of them are a paper medium and as incoming air passes through the dirt gets trapped in the filter where it can be removed with regular scheduled changing. These filters do much more than just filter the air coming into your cabin, they protect the sensors and mechanical parts of the system and that's why we started to see these in vehicles about the time that multiple sensors started appearing in the HVAC systems. So, what happens when one gets really dirty? Your airflow slows down and you won't have as much heat or A/C and the windows could fog easily. Don't be tempted to remove one and leave it out for convenience. If you do, there's a high risk of damaging the expensive parts of the system when they become contaminated with dirt. Filters are readily available and most take about 5 minutes or so to install. Average prices range from $10.00 to $20.00 with service intervals on average of one year but some may dirty quicker depending on where you drive.

Take care, the Motor Medics

Helping Farmers

Dear Motor Medics,

I love to take care of my own car doing all the maintenance and inspections that I can and keeping it all up to date but recently I bought a used 2013 Malibu and there is no transmission dipstick. The manual says go to the dealership to have it checked. Are they for real? What were they thinking?

Mark in Omaha Nebraska

Dear Mark,

As the operator of a repair shop as well as the hosts of the Under The Hood radio show we like to see things made easy for our customers and listeners. By the way if you can't check it easily at home, we can't check it easily at the shop. Several years back the manufacturers started to remove transmission dipsticks sighting that the transmission fluid is not an item that needs to be checked nearly as often as the engine oil or brake fluid and that it should be checked as part of a regular maintenance program done at your dealership. We agree that it is not a fluid that typically is found low on a regular basis but even at our shop to check the fluid it must be on a hoist. If there is no leakage it's not the end of the world but if you ever do develop a small leak and want to check the level before driving to the repair shop it's not something you will be able to do at home.

Take care, the Motor Medics
