Ask the Motor Medics®

Automotive Advice from The Under the Hood® Show

Dear Motor Medics,

The wipers on all of my vehicles never seem to do the job and I'm looking for some answers. How long do wiper blades last? What are the best kinds to buy? How do you change them? And probably the most important one of all; I've had the rear wiper on my van changed several times and it still leaves a missed spot on the center of the glass. Guys, I know you can help all of us who suffer with poor wipers.

Deborah in Larchwood Iowa

Dear Deborah,

Many vehicles on the road have poor wipers. Either they have just not been looked after or they have only been partially repaired. Most good quality wiper blades will last about a year but with weather conditions can deteriorate in less time. We always recommend the best quality name brand blades you can find and they are not that expensive. You can change them at home on most vehicles. Instructions are usually included and most require no tools. The following is important! The blades are not the only part of the wiper. The arms need to be working correctly or the blade will never do its job. If they are bent or they don't move on their hinge freely they won't apply proper pressure to the blade and that's likely the issue with your vans rear blade. If the arm is bad parts stores usually carry the entire arm to resolve your issue.

Take care, The Motor Medics

Dear Motor Medics,

I have a 2006 Jeep Liberty and it has been steadily losing power over the past several months. I took it in to more than one shop and they could not find the issue. After the power loss became so bad that I could not reach more than 50mph I took it to another shop who diagnosed it as plugged catalytic converters. Since they want about $1000.00 to replace them, I have parked it until I can find out more about them. What is a catalytic convertor and do they normally fail with only 70,000 miles? When I do replace them is there a way to save some money such as a used part?

David in Emery South Dakota

Catalytic convertors are placed in the exhaust pipe to convert harmful exhaust gasses by way of a catalyst. The convertors contain small passages that can become plugged due to oil burning, poor state of tune which results in unburned fuel reaching the convertor, or poor-quality construction. We see less failure in vehicles that are well maintained. They can fail at low mileage but there may be good news for you. The emissions warranty on a convertor is usually eight years or eighty thousand miles. You may be eligible for a free replacement. You need to check with a Jeep dealer to find out if you're covered. Used units can't be sold so check with exhaust shops for cheaper aftermarket alternatives.

Take care, The Motor Medics
